THE MINISTERS AGREE

The Note Was Altered to Suit the American Idea.

The German Government Still Insists Upon "the Severest Admissable Punishment," as the Note Puts It.

London, Dec. 7 .- The Daily News publishes the following from Nagasaki dated December 4: The order to send 5,000 Rusian troops back to Odessa has been countermanded. They will remain in the far east until further orders.

Negotiations for the peace settlement have not yet been opened, says the Peking correspondent of the Morning Post wiring yesterday. The French, German and Japanese ministers are awaiting instruction and Princes Ching and Li Hung Chang are awaiting a more satisfactory edict. The impressions is growing among men of all nationalities that peace is impossible, that a resumption of the campaign in the spring is inevitable and that partition is the only solution. Two American missionaries complain that the Germans at Cho Chau loot converts equally with other Chinese.

Berlin, Dec. 8.-With reference to the news communicated from London that an agreement has been reached at Peking, a high official of the German foreign office, who is empowered to speak in the name of Count von Buelow, imperial chancellor, said Friday evening:

"The report is correct, but there are still some minor points unsettled. It was clear from the first that the note formulated by the foreign envoys in Peking would not be accepted, inasmuch as the United States disavowed Mr. Conger instantly and Russia raised some formal objections. Now that the envoys are agreed, and the note is acceptable to the United States, there should be no exultation as if the other powers had been bowed to the will of one nation. All were free to take whatever course they chose, and they chose in the interest the note to meet the views of the United States. It is to be hoped that the fact that Germany has gone so far in complying with the wishes of the United States will meet with recognition in America."

Referring to the question of punishments, the official in question pointed out that Germany still insists upon "the severest admissable punishment," as the note puts it.

Li Hung Chang has informed Gen. Chaffee that he and all the people of pleased and gratified at the behavior of the American troops toward the Chinese. This is considered no light spaired of matter. From all sections of the portion of the city under American suthankfulness and commendation regarding the behavior of the Ameri-

Washington, Dec. 10.-The next important step in the Chinese situation will be the formal presentation to the Chinese plenipotentiaries of the agreement arrived at between the representatives of the powers at Peking for reparation for the Boxer outrages. In just what manner this will be done Mr. Conger has not informed the state department although the probability is that the document will be handed to the Chinese by the direction of the diplomatie corps. As has been stated already, the agreement is simply a statement of the terms upon which the powers will negotiate with China for final settlement, and it is laid before the Chinese officials as a matter

The negotiations for final settlement will come later after the Chinese have been given a reasonable opportunity for the consideration of the conditions laid down by the powers. The complete agreement, deciphered from the code, is now in the hands of the president. Officials decline to make its text public in advance of the receipt of information that it has been formally accepted by the powers, although the advices which have heretofore come from Mr. Conger leave no doubt that this will be the case. The essential features of the agreement already have been outline in the music, died here Sunday of a complipress dispatches.

TELEGRAPHERS' STRIKE.

Officials of the Santa Fe Road Claim That the Backbone Is Practically Broken.

Topeka, Kan., Dec. 10.-The officials of the Santa Fe road take a decidedly hopeful view of the telegraphers' strike situation. They all say the backbone of the strike is virtually broken already, and that the affairs of the road will be in their normal condition inside of two weeks. The officers felt justified Sunday night, in view of the alleged improvement in conditions, in rescinding the order closing the shops.

H. U. Mudge, general manager of the road, sent out a general order Sunday afternoon to all operators who had not yet gone out, offering tc promote them if they would continue in their resistance to the strikers. He told them that they had been faithful to the interests of the company thus far and that they could fill out their application blanks for better positions at once. The general manager added that all the men not taking part in the strike should have better positions, if they were capable of filling them, and their old places would be filled from outside sources.

Albuquerque, N. M., Dec. 10.-The strike of the Santa Fe operators is beginning to be felt here. Passenger trains were all several hours late Sunday night and while there are plenty of operators here, freight trains are tied up waiting for orders at several stations where men have gone out. The closing of the shops here will interfering with business.

Topeka, Kan., Dec. 10.-The follow-strikers' representatives: At 8 o'clock Sunday night practically all the telegraphers on the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe proper, are still out. A few men returned to on her forecastle with a lantern. work Sunday morning under the impression that the strike had been called off and were later on induced I could not put about to hunt for any to join the strikers. Later in the day they were all out to a man west of Emporia. Not a man will return to work unless their grievances are settled in the fullest possible manner. Some of them have already other of peace and harmony. They altered prospects offered them en other roads and will accept them if the Santa Fe management persists in its present course.

Iron Ore Barge Goes to the Bottom of Lake Erie During a Gale.

The Vessel Was Valued at $19,000, But the Insurance Had Elapsed December 1-The Cargo Was Covered By Insurance.

Erie, Pa., Dec. 10.-In the midst of the most bitter gales that ever swept Lake Erie, the iron ore barge Charles Foster, in tow of the Iron Duke, went to the bottom at 4 o'clock Sunday morning ten miles off Erie, and eight persons were drowned, as follows: Capt. John Brindge, of Cleveland; first and second mates, names unknown; Seamen Robert Wood and William Kelly, both of Port Austin, Mich.; Mrs. May, cook, of Detroit, Mich., and two unknown deck hands.

The Charles Foster was one of the fleet of James Corrigan, of Cleveland, and for two months has been running from Duluth to Erie with iron ore. Her cargo consisted of 1,500 tons of ore. Capt. Ashley, of the Iron Duke, made Erie in safety. In an interview he said:

"The Foster was in tow 600 feet astern. I was up all night, and there were three men on watch with me. The seas were rolling tremendously from the northwest, and the gale carried with it a blinding snow storm. We made the harbor light all right. throw 600 men out of work, greatly When we turned for the harbor a sea much heavier than any other experienced struck us. > "The towline parted when she went down. The storm was so heavy that one. There would not have been a particle of use anyhow, because in those tremendous waters no one could have lived a minute even if they had not been icy cold. Had there been a cry for help I would have turned and risked my ship, but it was no use. I had all I could do to make port in safety myself."

When asked for an opinion as to the cause of the sinking of the Foster, Capt. Ashley said that he could not tell.

"Apparently everything was all right aboard until she took that fatal dip. There had not been a single signal of distress from her up to that

There are 80 to 100 feet of water where the wreck occurred, and there is little hope of ever being able to lecate the place. The Foster was valued at $19,000, but there was no insurance, as it elapsed December 1. The cargo was not insured. The lifesaving crew took a trip out Sunday, but could find no trace of wreckage.

GET-RICH-QUICK SCHEME.

Chicago Authorities Looking For J. C. Bartlett, Who Is Endeavoring to Get Up a Blind Pool.

Chicago, Dec. 8 .- The authorities are looking for one J. C. Bartlett, who has been endeavoring to get up a "blind pool" for the purpose of inducing people to send him from $100 to $1,000 to be invested in stocks for his benefit. In order to give his scheme standing, he has scattered broadcast over the country within the last week or ten days a very seductive "confidential letter" printed on what purported to be a letter head of Bartlett, Frazier & Co., of this city. The circular did not guarantee any stated profits, but conveyed the information that "Bartlett" expected "to do better than heretofore," when he "paid a 65 per cent. dividend." It is believed that quite a number of people have been caught by this get-richquick scheme. The authorities have located the office of "Bartlett" in one of the large buildings, but have thus far been unable to arrest him.

At last she was forced cabin passengers. They would have in vindication of her own good name swelled the total immigration to 514,- to take the stand and tell the whole shameful story. She was in good voice and had recovered from her nervousness of Thursday evening. Florence told of presents of perfumes, diamond rings, wines and liquors which Bott had given her mother. She knew of these because her mother had told her about receiving them, She had seen her mother fix the side door so that Bott could enter without ringing the bell. Bott sent Mrs. Sells green liquors in fancy bottles. Florence had seen her mother enter the Bunson block and go up the stairs to Bott's rooms.

Florence said that she and her mother stopped at the West Baden hotel, West Baden, Ind., in May, 1899. William Bott was there, and she frequently saw him in her mother's room at night. Her father was not at West Baden. Bott was also with Mrs. Sells at the Thousand Islands the same summer. Her mother and Bott had taken long trips about the islands together, sometimes being away all day. Florence said her father was very kind to her mother, and she had never seen him under the influence of liquor. According to the testimony of Florence, Bott had been warned over the telephone by some unknown woman, who told him to put his property out of his hands as soon as possible, as he was going to be in serious trouble. Florence told of the last day at home and of the last hours she spent with her mother. She told of how on one occasion that her mother had promised her she would never receive Bott again, and then on the next night he was in her mother's room. Florence told of leaving home and going to her aunt's, where for the first time she told her father of her mother's

As Florence told this story she was overcome by her emotion and was compelled to pause. Tears came into her eyes as she told of how she had begged and pleaded with her mother to forbid Bott the house and how that mother had broken the promise she had made. Even the judge on the bench was affected and the women in the lobby had their hand-Roosevelt accepted the committee's kerchiefs to their eyes. For the first time Mrs. Sells was affected, and it seemed to require all her strength to retain her calmness.

When the direct examination of Florence Sells was concluded there was expectation. Every one was expecting that no mercy would be shown the girl in the cross-examination, but Col. Holmes, counsel for Mrs. Sells, arose and said: "Miss Sells, your mother has requested me not to cross-examine her daughter, and I will only ask you six questions. to which you can return short answers."

Mrs. Sells had broken down and was sobbing softly, but her daughter was dry-eyed and answered the questions in a firm tone. They were in regard to her love for her mother and grandmother and why she had not visited them. It was the most sensational scene ever seen in a court room in this city. When Florence was dismissed from the stand the plaintiff rested. Florence was conducted from the court room by her father, while the mother sat sobbing in her chair. The judge on the bench turned his eyes away and the counsel for both defense and plaintiff sat silent in their chairs. There had been dramatic incidents in the case before Friday, but this was the climax. Forget- for the ting the fact that the daughter had turned from her in her trouble, forgetting her appearance on the stand and the testimony she had given, the mother bowed her head and waived the right of cross-examination, and let the story of Florence go to the judge. No matter what Mrs. Sells was or is, no matter her sins, her follies or misdeeds, she rose superior to them all and spared her child the ordeal of a cross-examination. The plaintiff had but one more witness to call, but he was ill and could not come, so, with the understanding that he might be put on the stand at some future time. the case of the plaintiff was then rested.

[Lexington Leader.]

Walter Champ, editor and owner of the Paris Bourson News. died sudden-ly from heart disease at his home in Paris at 9 o, clock Saturday morning Mr. Champ had been in failing health for some time, but had not taken his bed until yesterday. During the past summer he made a trip to Europe, thinking it would prove beneficial but it did not.

The deceased was 32 years of age and the son of the late Bruce Champ, who founded the Bourbon News in Millersburg, Bourbon county, in 1881. The paper was afterward removed to Paris and its founder died in that city in The paper then passed into the control of Walter Champ and his cousin, Bruce Miller, who is now conducting the Paris Kentuckian-Citizen.

Walter Champ was an exceedingly popular young man and a writer of considerable note. A number of his clever short stories and bright sketches -many of them in the Negro dialecthave appeared in "Puck" and the various journals and magiznes of the country. He was a polished gentleman at all times and greatly beloved by those who knew him best.

He began the newspaper business by learning the art of printing in his father's office. He is survived by a younger brother, Swift Champ, who was associated with him on The News, and who will now assume its control.

They were removed in Davis ambulence to Mrs. Earlywine's boarding ambulence to Mrs. Earlywine's boarding ambulence to Mrs. Earlywine's boarding ambulence and Drs. Kenney and Sweeney social favorite who will be greatly missed by his friends an acquaintances.

Walter Champ was a member of Paris Lodge No. 373, B. P. O. Elks, who will have charge of the funeral and turns services. The funeral will be held at the Paris Christian church Sunday aftnoon at 1:30 o'clook and the burial will take place in the family let in the Millersburg cemetery.

Mr. Champ was well known in Lexington and had many friends here. Col.J.G. Craddock, one of his associates, today said that the deceased had been one of the most agreeable and pleasant co-workers he had ever had in the newspaper business.

Read the Advertiseme its.

The crowded condition of the advertising co'umns of THE NEWS is a strong endorsement of the value placed upon it by the merchants of Paris and the county. Never in the history of the paper has it been so taxed for space. There is probably no city in the State whose merchants are as liberal advertisers as those of Paris. There is really no reason for any person to go to Cincinnati or Lexington to purchase goods. Paris merchants can supply their wants with the same quality of goods and very often at greatly reduced prices. Read the "ad" columns of The News and profit thereby.

CHAPTER I.

There was a touch of the destroying rection. I am so awkward." breath of autumn in the keen wind which swept over Lyndhurst, an old colonial mansion on the Hudson near New York. The big trees on the terraced lawn and in the dense wood behind the house were shedding their sere and yellow foliage, and in the ex- mal. tensive garden on the left of the entrance not even a belated flower could be seen in the well-arranged parterres. Here stood a marble statue, there a playing fountain; the entire aspect was and that I have now only this estate cold and cheerless. Within the mansion quite a different livery stood in the vast hall; whitecapped, white-aproned maid-servants moved about with soft tread and solicitous mien. Five o'clock tea was being served in the quaint Elizabethan drawing room. A man less than 40 years of age, tall, handsome and with a military bearing, reclined in a quaintly carved easy chair before the glowing wood fire with its old-fashioned brass fender and dragon-shaped andirons. The man's face was full, dark and round; his high, broad brow suggested considerable power of intellect; he wore no beard, and his short thick hair was touched with gray. He had but one questionable feature; an expert physiognomist might have said that it was a pity such a strong face should be marred by a mouth slightly inclined towards weakness. His wife, who sat near him, was a handsome woman; she was perhaps as old as he. Her complexion was clear and good; her teeth were fine and even; between her parted lips they caught the red firelight and threw it back broken into tiny gleams. Her hands and feet were small and well shaped, her body possessed an undulating ease of movement that gratified the visual sense of the beholder. Her hair was dark brown, her eyes black and sharp, and these

"I am sorry, but I shall miss my train if I stay even a moment longer; as it is I shall have to urge your coachman to drive rapidly."

"Oh, surely you are not going, Miss Dean," protested Maj. Goddard, rising and coming towards them. "We really see so little of you, you know, and when on do honor us it is generally only to the extent of a pop call. I am really going to incite my ward to downright mebellion against you and all the rest of her old school friends."

"That is right, Guardian." The pianist smiled as she rose; "you must stand by me. Lottie has such a nice time in the city that she is getting above such a quiet retreat as this."

As he reentered the drawing room the expression of his wife's face riveted his attention. Mrs. James had pinned against the trunk of who had left the piano and was pouring the tee at the low brass table in the center of the room. The look she was giving his ward was so full of malignant dislike that the genial face of the major grew grave. He seated himself in the chair he had just left and eyed his wife attentively. Just then Miss Briscoe brought a cup of tea to him.

"You'll find it exactly right, Guardian," she said with a smile. "I not only know the number but I now understand the size of the lumps of sugar you want."

"It is always right, Blanche, when you pour it for me." He would have added further pleasantries to this an's voice which strongly appealed to had he not felt the rigid stare of his wife upon him.

I wish she could put a better face on the matter and not take it so very hard. As far as I am concerned, I had made up my mind that matters were not so bad, after all, but she is ambitious, you see, and I never was. I have grown tired trying to get rich. I would like to rest, buthaughtily out into the hall. "O, I say, Jeanne!" exclaimed her husband, rising and going to the door, but she had gone out on the lawn, and when he came back to the fire he and his ward saw her walking to and fro on the asphalt drive. A moment later she turned and gave an inaudible order to James, the footman, and he came out to her shortly with a revolver and a box of cartridges.

Goddard went to the window and Blanche followed.

"She's going to practice shooting." he said. "When she is full of anger she seems to find a vent for it in target practice. Watch her; she certainly has the most wonderful marksmanship

"But I have no use for so much money," said the girl, almost pleadingly, "and I would be so glad if you would take what you need of it."

The major flushed. "It would be a cowardly thing to do, and it would cail forth much criticism; no, your money is yours; your father saw that I was sufficiently repaid for my services, besides, nothing less than your entire fortune would give Jeanne all she craves. She did not sleep a wink last night. I heard her walking constantly from the moment she retired till dawn. I went to her door twice and rapped, but she would not admit me. When it indicates that your spirits are depressed my sky becomes clouded, and then I don't care for anything else. It used to be so while I was at school. The girls used to watch for you to drive up and they actually raved over you. They all thought you were so hand-

But Maj. Goddard was not following her with attention.

"I have been wanting all this week to put a candid question to you, Blanche,' he remarked, irrelevantly. "I am a little afraid you will not fully understand my motive, but I do want your opinion-a woman can judge another woman's heart better than a man can, even if he is her husband. I want to know, Blanche, if you think Jeanne cares for me a little bit?"

The girl could not command her suddenly roused emotions; she started and her long lashes fell before his eager, almost breathless stare. It was as if the question had been a shot which reached the very citadel of her most sacred convictions.

"Guardian, you must not-you ought not-" she seemed unable to proceed. "I know I ought to be ashamed of myself for admitting that I have doubts, but since my loss and her strange reception of the news I can't help feeling as I do. Oh! Blanche, do you think she only married me for the

"If what, Blanche?" "If I had been your wife I should have loved you more in misfortune than ever. Oh, I am so sorry for you! It is breaking my heart." She raised her handkerchief to her eyes and began to ery softly.

Goddard pushed her head back gently till she was forced to look into his eyes.

"Don't do that, little girl," he said, tenderly, "it breaks me all to pieces to ee a woman's tears. I wish the old days could somehow come back; those lays when I dreamed of a young trustng wife who would love me for myself and draw me away from evil indinations. You never guessed it, little girl, but-" he seemed to realize that he was going too far, for he broke off short and after a moment's pause he began again: "Never was a man a greater slave to a woman's whims than I am to hers. Maj. Goddard spent all the next day in the city busy over some legal matters connected with his recent losses. He missed his usual train and was forced to take one an hour later. In consequence of this delay it was dark when he arrived home. The drawingcoom was lighted, and through the window he saw Blanche and his private secretary, Mr. Hubert Talley, at the piano, but he did not enter. All day he had been worrying over his wife's recent moroseness, and he did not want to lose a moment before seeing her. He fancied she must be in her own apartment, so he went up stairs to her door. It was closed. He rapped gently, but received no response from within. He rapped again, but with no better result; then he tried the latch and found the door locked. He looked into the library, a large, cozy apartment opposite the drawingroom. A coal fire was burning warm and red in the grate, but the room was empty. Just then the butler, Wilkins, opened the folding doors and a view of the electric-lighted dininghall in its vast splendor of white cloth, silver and cut-glass met Goddard's roving eye.

"Has Mrs. Goddard come down?" the major asked. "I did not know she had returned,

"Returned! from where?" "From the city, sir. She went in his afternoon.'

"To the city! at what time?" "She caught the 1:40 train;" it was Blanche's voice behind him, and it contained a note of startled concern. She said she would go direct to your office and return with you."

"I have not seen her; my God! what an have happened to her?" Blanche motioned the butler to retire, and he did so, discreetly closing Moliere Made His Friends Wait Until Morning and Saved Their Lives.

Dr. Siddale, the well-known London physician, during his vacation a few ears ago was fishing one evening in a cotch loch when a man approached, aught him by the shoulders and shook nim violently. A glance told the doctor that the man was insane. He was a auge fellow; the doctor was small and possessed of little physical strength. No one was in sight.

"What are you going to do?" asked the doctor, calmly, relates Youth's Companion.

"Throw you into that water!" shoutd the man. "Certainly," said the doctor; "but I'll have to go home and put on a dress suit. Dead men always wear evening dress." The madman stopped, looked at him doubtfully, and said: "So they do.

Make haste. I'll wait." Dr. Siddale walked slowly up the bank, and then ran for his life. It requires calmness and courage of a rare quality to cope with the vagaries of a disordered brain. Moliere, the great French dramatist, was ill, and had retired to his villa at Aurenil for rest and quiet. One day Boileau, Lulli and another friend came to visit him. M. La Chapelle did the honors for Moliere. By the time supper was over, the guests were in so exalted a state that they resolved to set an example to France by dying philosophically together, to prove their contempt of the world. They determined to drown themselves in the Seine, but first went to bid their host an eternal arewell. Molière cast a hasty glance at the flushed faces around his bed. "But you have forgotten me!" he cried. "I, too, must share in this glorious act.' "True, true!" they shouted. "He is our brother! He shall die with us. Come on!"

"Not to-night," said Moliere, calmly, "or France will say we were ashamed of the deed. Wait until morning, and then if we die, nobody can doubt our motives."

They consented, and crept away to bed. When they rose sober in the morning not one of them spoke of suicide

Some Peculiarities of the Chinese in Their Method of Reasoning.

Gambling debts are preeminently debts of honor in China, and they are more willingly and speedily paid than any others. To pay them, a Chinaman will pawn all his property, and even sell his children. Phrenologist Tells the Meaning of the Bumps on the Humorist's Skull.

A phrenologist who has recently made an examination of Mark Twain's head says the humorist's mascu'ine qualities are far in excess of the feminine. His temperament may be described as "fibrous." Every nerve in his body seems in active service and his brain is a clearing-house to which checks and drafts are sent from every nook and corner of his frame. There is also a fine balance between the different functions, es pecially as regards his brain. In his vital economy nothing is wasted Hence his constitution insures depth of feeling, earnestness of purpose, capacity for long-continued mental strain, with remarkable keenness and accuracy of judgment.

The deep set eyes denote more pre cision than fluency in the use of words. His hesitating manner of speech shows that every syllable is carefully weighed. The fullness of his upper forehead makes him a philosopher and a critic. The tautness of the skin over that area signifies long and increasing activity of those refleetive powers. In a word, he has great intelligence in the broadest sense of the term.

The sentiment of mirth is said to be much less marked than many would suppose. But the nature of his merriment is in perfect accord with the form of his brain.
